Inspired by the Calls-to-Action articulated within the Final Report of Canada's Truth and Reconciliation Commission (TRC), this event invites conversation from faculty, staff, and students on the theme of reconciliation and the implications for Indigenous education research and graduate programs.

This interactive dialogue will focus on:

- What opportunities does the work of the TRC hold for Indigenous education research and graduate programming?
- What are the limitations of such a theme for Indigenous research priorities, methodologies, and courses?
- Possible commitments and responsibilities
- Directions for the Indigenous education research, graduate programs and teaching.

This event is hosted by the Office of Indigenous Education and the Office of Research in Education
